A large Asian carp has been fished out of a waterway close to the Great Lakes and beyond twin electric barriers designed to keep them out. This is the first time carp have been found beyond the electric barriers in the waterways that connect Lake

Michigan

, one of the five Great Lakes, with the Mississippi River basin, where the carp have run amok. Michigan and other U.S. states bordering the Great Lakes have filed suit demanding a separation of the two basins, fearing Asian carp will ruin the Great Lakes' $7 billion fishery.
