Were you beginning to feel sorry for BP? Don't! An article in today's Washington Post documents a long history of problems and ignored recommendations. A series of internal investigations over the past decade warned senior BP managers that the oil company repeatedly disregarded safety and environmental rules and risked a serious accident if it did not change its ways. These included instances in which management flouted safety by neglecting aging equipment, pressured employees not to report problems and cut short or delayed inspections to reduce production costs.
